1st FLAUC Young Scholars Conference

“China & Latin America from a multidisciplinary perspective: Trade · Cooperation · Development”

November Tuesday 12th, University of Chile

Organizer: Instituto de Estudios Internacionales, Universidad de Chile
Centro Estudios Asiáticos, Pontificia Universidad Católica de Chile

Overview

Institute of International Studies, based at University of Chile, invites young social sciences scholars, from Master candidates to Post-doctoral positions, throughout FLAUC's international network to participate in its 1st FLAUC Young Scholars Conference on November 12, 2019 at University of Chile, Santiago of Chile.

The conference aims to encourage young social sciences scholars to get together so they can exchange ideas and share research findings. It strives to be a dynamic forum for international participants from a variety of disciplinary backgrounds to build new synergies and develop future collaborative projects.

Methodology

The conference aims to foster a collaborative dialogue, looking forward to a stimulating debate among the invited speakers, young scholars and the audience.

The symposium is mainly based on a roundtable discussion. Each roundtable will comprise a minimum of 4 participants. Each speaker will have 10 minutes to present their paper, followed by Q&A. The conference language is English.

Topics

This year's conference topic “China & Latin America from a multidisciplinary perspective: Trade · Cooperation · Development” will include data-driven studies, both quantitative and qualitative, from all social science disciplines.
